Getting Results Facilitated Online Discussion Group

Following the Teaching Skills Workshop, join your peers and continue to explore fundamental teaching practices by participating in CREATE's facilitated online discussion group.

Each week, participants will independently review selected sections of the web-based teaching resource Getting Results (<http://league.org/gettingresults>) and then discuss, as a group, what's been learned and how it might be applied in your classrooms.

The Getting Results materials, developed by the WGBH Educational Foundation with support by the National Science Foundation and the League for Innovation in the Community College, are designed specifically for instructors in technical fields and use a blend of text, videos and interactive exercises to present teaching issues and educational resources. Our discussions will help us to think through these issues and determine how to practically apply what we've learned.

The activities have been designed to take only a few hours a week but the benefit of connecting with your peers and continuing to deepen your knowledge of teaching should make this a worthwhile investment of your time and energy. Participants who complete the full course will be eligible for a modest stipend.

More details below; hope to see you online!
